

Giap Minh Bui is principal natural resources and agriculture economist in the Central and West Asia Department, Asian Development Bank (ADB). He has pioneered in the formulation and execution of lasting-impact and least-cost economic policies for 26 years. His professional areas include: standard and non-conventional macroeconomic policies (fiscal, monetary, and supply-side) for sustainable and inclusive growth, price stability, and quality job creation; financing viable “public goods” as catalysts for private sector investments; SOE restructuring (privatization and MBO); project finance (due diligence on both greenfield and brownfield investments); structured finance (supply chain); food security and safety; regional and international trade; agro-enterprise business development; agro-commodity financing; and non-traditional products in agribusiness financing. He currently leads investment strategy and planning, and investment project/program/product design and implementation. Prior to joining ADB, he advised governments, central banks, commercial banks, international financial institutions (ADB, BIS, IFC, IMF, WB), multi-industry business firms, and bilateral international development agencies.
